Ever since the first Passover seder, we Jews have understood the power of experiential education. At our seder tables last month, we did not simply talk about slavery, we tasted its bitterness; we not only sang songs that celebrated freedom, we savored its sweetness in the wine on our tongues.

Temple Emanu-El carries on the tradition in manifold ways, not only in creative approaches to Jewish education within our walls, but in our journeys beyond them. That is how we have always understood our congregational trips to Israel—as 12-day programs in experiential Jewish education—so what looks like an itinerary is really a curriculum. We don't just talk archaeology; we do it. We don't just look at maps; we stand on hilltops. We don't just listen to news reports about local populations—we interact with Palestinians and Israelis.

Consistent with the Sh’mah Emanu-El theme of this month’s Window, those experiences have the potential to create wonderful relationships among the congregants who participate in them. While some trips are bigger than others, they are all essentially exercises in creating powerful shared experiences for small groups that often create sustaining relationships among Temple members long after the (Continued on Page 18)

“A Strong and Vibrant Jewish Future”

Following are excerpts adapted from President Scott McCartney’s Annual Meeting address on March 25.

It’s been an incredible year for Temple. We hosted President Obama in November, and yesterday President Bush for the amazing memorial service for our past president, Bob Strauss, who had more power in Washington than either of those other guys.

We are in the midst of major transformational projects that will strengthen the future of this historic congregation and position it as a center of the Reform Jewish community in Dallas for generations to come.

This fall, we will add an exciting high school program to our Religious School. Our social justice efforts have expanded and attracted the attention of the White House. We are embarking on new membership initiatives. There will be more Shabbat dinners onsite and at local restaurants.

We’ll build a new chapel right-sized for most of our life cycle and Shabbat services, between the 770 fixed seats of Olan, and the 200 or so seats in Lefkowitz Chapel... We’ll build a new wing of classrooms for the Early Childhood Education Center and Religious School... Linz will be transformed into the central city square of our campus, with a big, new inviting front entry, a large gathering space with tables, chairs, couches, a coffee bar and reception desk... There will be a new Linz Hall where the clergy offices are now, and whether you park in the south lot or the Hillcrest side, you’ll end up right at Grand Central.

By itself, the new and renovated building won’t create connections, merely facilitate. And so we have concurrently launched Sh’m’a Emanu-El to bring congregants together in new and exciting ways.

The next phase of Sh’m’a Emanu-El will be creating small groups that will meet regularly, focusing on the lives and significant concerns of our members. They’ll have discussion topics and curriculum from the clergy. They’ll feature shared Jewish experiences, learning and celebration. They’ll be self-led by trained lay leaders.

So tonight I report Temple is laser-focused on a strong and vibrant Jewish future. This past year has been one of joy and sorrow—with significant accomplishment. This next fiscal year will be one where our preparation and planting takes root and blossoms.

Editor’s Note

Over the past eight months, the Communications Department has made significant changes to The Window, including adding color, improving the paper quality and creating a new, magazine-style format.

This summer, we will have two combined issues that will be in your homes on or before June 15 and August 15. The June/July issue will include photos and details from the May 2-4 Weekend of Celebration, as well as updates on preparations for construction. The August/September issue will include a High Holy Days section, detailing the journey from Elul to Simchat Torah.

We are constantly evolving The Window to be a compelling publication that engages you in our vibrant congregation. We are always happy to hear from you. Enjoy!

Our Temple, Our Rabbi, Our History

To celebrate Temple Emanu-El of the 21st century and beyond, the Dorothy and Henry Jacobus Archives is opening a new exhibit: “Our Temple, Our Rabbi, Our History,” curated by Archivist Gerry Cristol and Archives Committee chair Joyce Goldberg, both pictured below.

Temple’s auspicious history is closely tied with the history of the city of Dallas. We have been in four buildings since 1876, when the first temple was built on Commerce Street. In 1899, it moved to a new residential area on South Ervay Street, then to South Boulevard in 1917. In 1957, we broke ground on our architecturally acclaimed current building. All the while, our clergy and members have helped shape the history of Dallas.

The exhibit also covers significant milestones in the 25-year tenure of Rabbi David Stern, who is being honored May 2-4 with a weekend of celebration that culminates in the groundbreaking for the new addition to Temple. Step into the archives for a fascinating look at Temple’s history.

Our Future | Under Construction

Soon after our historic groundbreaking on May 4, Temple will be getting ready for lots of big changes. Beginning in June, you’ll see fencing and construction vehicles onsite. In addition:

- All vehicles will access the parking lot through the south parking lot entrance on Hillcrest. No other entrances will be available.
- Congregants, staff and visitors to the building will enter at the Olan Sanctuary entrance.

Watch The Window, www.tedallas.org, the Weekly Update, Temple’s Facebook and construction-related mailings for updates.

Mah Nishmah?!
What’s up?
Helping save lives, speaking out for Israel, touring historic synagogues, hosting Mandy Patinkin and bonding with furry pals—Temple doesn’t miss a beat!
The Heartbeat of Sh’ma Emanu-El

What we’ve learned: People feel more connected in meaningful relationships. What’s next: Temple’s far-reaching listening effort is developing a model for small-group interaction.

Meaningful impressions so far?

Sara Albert: I wasn’t sure what to expect, but something has drawn me in. I want to see where it will take me and the congregation. It’s ok to not know exactly where we’re going. I’ve been surprised by the effect of all the conversations. In slowing down, you see something, you learn something from that person you’ve seen 25 times in the hallway.

Barbara Hyman: Now I know people in a more connected way. These are conversations that go beyond items on the agenda; they share part of their hearts.

Michael Selz: There are two things I’ve done at Temple that really got me connected here: Mussar and Robin (Kosberg’s) class (Torah From the Beginning). These are both tight communities, but with no barriers to entry, where people are committed to seeing each other on a regular basis. And I believe... that everyone should have some taste of these higher rewards. It requires some small risk-taking though. People usually want to be in charge of their own experiences. But the kind of listening we’re doing here requires generosity and yielding control.

What is Temple’s role in nurturing small groups?
BH: Saddleback Church (a Southern California megachurch) knows how to do small groups. We’re not a church. We have to do it our way. The church is the connector; the experience is a really good one when they have that connection. They’re surprised they want more.

MS: Yoga, biking, other small group experiences that people talk about—they allow consumers to frame up their own experience. So what does Temple have to offer such a group? It’s the important question, because if that wonderful experience doesn’t bubble up to a stronger connection to Temple, then we’ve just created another competitor for people’s time.

So, the question on everyone’s minds: What’s next?
MS: We’ve reached a certain critical mass. The challenge at this point is how to grow it, and what Temple can do to help the groundswell.

SA: It needs to be elevated to something more than a social gathering. You don’t have to have the Budget Committee as a small group. The traditional governance structure will still be in place, but if Sh’ma Emanu-El doesn’t impact it, we haven’t done our job. The message is: Please come to the debrief meeting on May 6 and help us figure it out!

WHAT THEY’RE SAYING
Following are some reflective comments shared by Sh’ma Emanu-El Havdalah party hosts after their events. Each two-hour party included a Havdalah service (led remotely by our cantors) and a structured conversation led by a facilitator.

• The best part was the connections we felt. I overheard two people exchanging telephone numbers in order to help with dog training. Simple exchanges like that, I believe, are part of the idea. –Ruth Klein

• I am always amazed when we play Jewish Geography. At our Havdalah get-together, I discovered that one guest and I attended the same elementary school, P.S. 213, in the East New York, New Lots area of Brooklyn. We only lived about four city blocks from each other and we were able to share our local neighborhood memories. –Marty Mintz

• We had an interesting mix of people who were members anywhere from 6 months to 55 years. Great conversation with diverse ideas, memories, opinions. Everyone left having made new friends and with a warm feeling for them. The new-to-Dallas couple lives near me and will join our seder this year. –Ann Kahn

• I want to reiterate how much we both enjoyed the Havdalah experience this past Saturday… That’s more than I can say for most of the experiences I’ve had at Temple over the many years we’ve been members… I think the large group feel of most of the activities I’ve been involved with has prevented any real intimacy. I think having Temple offer a structure, as well as a facilitator, is part of the success you are having with this current program. I feel like I’m actually getting something emotionally satisfying in return for my Temple dues, rather than just making a donation to a fund that is pretty abstract to me. –Peggy Schpok

Ruth Klein says the blessing using the traditional twisted candle at a Havdalah party held at her home.

Brad Sham, Patricia Halpern, Leslie and Bob Krakow, Rhonda and Tom Grimsley at a Havdalah party hosted by the Krakows.

Marty Mintz, standing, and Michael Lowenberg, seated, met at a Sh’ma Emanu-El party and learned they grew up in the same Brooklyn neighborhood.

Opportunities to honor Rabbi David Stern
Now through May 19, we are celebrating the 25th anniversary of Rabbi David Stern’s ordination and his time at Temple Emanu-El. To honor Rabbi Stern, please consider a donation to the Online Tribute Journal at www.tedallas.org/onlinetributejournal. This online journal will be printed, bound and presented as a keepsake of this occasion, with proceeds going to benefit the capital campaign, Our Temple | Our Future, as requested by Rabbi Stern.

I am thrilled to announce that in the first half of 2015, Temple will be extending and deepening our successful experiments in Jewish travel learning with two trips to Israel and one to Europe. Here is the exciting lineup (see Page 5 for a related story).

January 25-February 3, 2015
The Big One: Dallas Community Mission to Israel
As part of a delegation led by Rabbi Asher Knight, Temple members will have the opportunity to participate in this wonderful community-wide mission to Israel, with participation from congregations across Dallas, and featuring fascinating activities on the ground that are only possible because of the scope and scale of this trip.

April 21-May 3, 2015
Jewish Journeys through Eastern Europe: Prague, Krakow, Warsaw and Berlin
Led by Rabbis David Stern and Nancy Kasten, and with Scholar-in-Residence Paul Liptz, this experience will feature historic cities, visits to Holocaust sites and interaction with the vibrant Jewish communities that are being reborn in these cities today.

June 7-18, 2015
Temple Emanu-El Explores Israel: A Congregational Experience for All Ages
Led by Cantor Leslie Niren, program director Karen Hoffman, and a member of the clergy to be named later, this will be the next step forward in Temple’s wonderful legacy of multigenerational trips to Israel, complete with the special opportunities that a summer trip offers. (The first meeting will take place on May 13 at 7pm in the Weiss Youth Wing.)

I hope that you will consider participating in one of these exciting opportunities for travel learning next year. And whether you end up packing a literal suitcase or going on journeys of learning within Temple’s walls, may all of our journeys in the life of Torah and the life of our people be for blessing. Nishah tovah – a good journey to all!

Couples Club Elects Officers

New officers have been selected for the Temple Emanu-El Couples Club, a social club for members and prospective members of Temple. To join, one of the couple must be 55 or older. Upcoming activities are being planned.

Greene’s Loui Dobin honored

Greene Family Camp Director Loui Dobin will be honored for his double chai service of 36 summers at 7pm Saturday, May 17, at Eddie Deen’s in Dallas.

Anyone who has been to Greene, sent a child to Greene or had the pleasure of meeting Loui in person is aware of the impact he’s had on children’s lives in the Texas-Oklahoma region. Let’s join together for a fun night in his honor, featuring special guests Kol B’Seder Reunion Concert with Loui, Danny Freelander and Jeff Klepper. Individual tickets are $75.

Attire: Camp Casual!
